The New York correspondent of "The Watchman," Boston, writes that the work of the son of Rev. E. S. Cotton says:—"At Cold Spring Harbor, two miles north of Huntington, Edward H. Cotton of New England stock, a senior in Union Theological seminary, is serving the Baptist church most acceptably. He is reported to be carrying about a wise head on young shoulders and is commending himself to all classes in the community. Plans are under consideration for the enlargement of the school building." Cold Spring Harbor is near Oyster Bay, the summer home of President Roosevelt.
The lads and lasses in the ninth grade of school are just now preparing language work. Last week, the boys of the class received a big lot of help from C. B. Hamilton, who took into the school room his cases of insects and talked to them about the American silk spinning moths. Those that are very common with us are the silkworm, the Cecropia and polyphemus. While their silk has never been put to practical use in the manufacture of silks, it could without doubt be profitably produced. Mr. Hamilton showed by his cases of mounted insects all stages from the egg to the matured specimen and their manner of living all the way along. The young people were more than interested in this nature study, made so plain to them. He also showed and told them about the two injurious moths, the brown tail and the gipsy. Monday he gave practically the same talk to the eighth grade.

FEBRUARY 14, 1903, NORWAY, MAINE.
VOLUME XXXIX
Norway Municipal Court.
Moses Mosher of North Waterford was before Judge Jones, Wednesday morning. To a charge of selling liquor he pleaded not guilty. County Attorney Charles P. Barnes conducted the case for the State. Mosher had no counsel.
Deputy Sheriff W. A. Bicknell testified that he served a warrant Tuesday afternoon. Found Mosher and a lady who he didn't know at the house. Mosher invited him in and said he had been expecting him. In the cellar he found eight barrels, two containing liquor and other articles. Two of the barrels that were lying on the side were sealed strongly of cider. There were also various boxes and barrels about the cellar. The floor was of natural earth. Found two moist places on bottom of cellar, dug the dirt and it smelled strongly of cider. About the house, shed, outhouse and stable there were 150 bottles. About three dozen of these seemed to be quite new. A quantity of the bottles and some rubber tubing were on exhibit. Some of the bottles contained dregs of various liquors and some were partly full of cider.
J. J. Walker Nason, the second witness, lives over rent occupied by Mosher. His wife, child, hired girl and himself make up the family. He works in woods and is at home nights. Stated that he had seen numerous cider barrels in cellar. Had known of people going in there sober and coming away intoxicated. Told of several people, residents of North Waterford, whom he had seen going and coming from there.
Ernest Nason, a brother of the preceding witness, answered a few questions as to seeing people go to Mosher's.
The State considered the evidence already given as sufficient without calling on other witnesses that had been summoned.
Mosher said he had nothing to say for himself.
County Attorney Barnes asked the court to consider the age of the man and he also remarked if Mosher ceased to violate the law there would be no further prosecution.
Judge Jones gave a sentence of $100 and costs of $20.52 and stated that the court would remit the fine upon payment of the costs. Mosher paid the costs and was discharged. He was told that if he committed another offense would mean a jail sentence.
Mosher remarked after the court closed that that was what you got by letting some one else handle your cider pitcher. Mosher is a man about 38 years of age, is a pretty feeble. The case, however, didn't seem to disturb him much but he held to the statement that he never sold a glass of cider or liquor.
Aboard and Abroad.
Rev. Herbert F. Moulton in his illustrated lecture, "Aboard and Abroad," at Norway Opera House, Tuesday evening, did all he was advertised to do and more. There seemed to be only one regret at the close and that was that the lecture was done, he made the time pass so quickly.
He showed us his starting point at Biddeford, his mode of travel on the cars and the White Star steamer Cretio, across the ocean, even when he was in the throes of sea-sickness, the ocean scenes and those about the steamship. He even took us to his stateroom. He showed us the hotel where he stayed in New York, the second largest city in the world and his boarding the steamer and out of New York harbor, the Brooklyn bridge, statues of liberty, etc.
We stopped with him off at the Azores and saw the strange cities, then on to Gibraltar, that great military station of Europe, probably the strongest fortress in the world, the way to the Mediterranean waters (by the way, the rocks in the pictures always reminds a Maine of our own Mt. Kincaid), then to Naples, that beautifully situated city of Italy, with its picturesque, and canals and care-free, poverty-stricken people, living, cooking and eating under the blue skies, sleeping in the best place they can find, the most ambitious going to "America" at their first opportunity.
Then we visited Vesuvius, saw it in repose and in its awful activity, and its lurid glare at night, and viewed Pompeii, that ancient city, buried beneath Vesuvius' lava and ashes so many years ago. We walked through the excavated ruins and saw the ruins and preserved remains of some of its people. In these buildings have been brought to light many instruments, tools and articles that give evidence of "lost arts" practiced by these Pompeiians.
Then aboard and to Rome—St. Peter's and the Vatican. His pictures thrown on the screen were so plain and realistic that it seemed almost as though we were actually going through these renowned places. The room in which is the statue of St. Peter and a devotee kissing the toes, and the climb on the knees up the stairs to the "holy of holies," were perhaps the most interesting.
Mr. Moulton said that when he was starting on his trip he met H. D. Smith of our village whose acquaintance he had previously formed on a western trip, and Mr. Smith asked him where he was going. "Aboard and Abroad" was the answer. "Thus doubtless was the lecture named." Mr. Smith went to the lecture named last night and saw and heard some things that his friend had said to that journey.
One of the first things that was handed Mr. Moulton on his arrival in Naples was a card with the U. S. flag and addressed Poland Spring water. By the way Poland Spring water is served in hotels in all the cities of the world and nothing so advertises Maine as her pure spring water, backed by the Richards, of Poland Springs. He showed us this dining room on one of our Maine hill tops and said it compared favorably with any he had seen in his 15,000 miles of foreign travel. But when he compared the roads of Italy, the best in the world, with the Maine roads that have gained the unenviable reputation of being the worst roads in the world, the comparison was not so favorable to us.
Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Akers drove to Hebron, Friday evening, to meet their son Vivian, so we are told. They were bundled up and it was dark so they did not observe that they met Vivian on his way to Norway. After they had waited at Hebron a while they returned and found Vivian waiting for them.

Contract for New Reservoir.
The Norway Water Co. to Have it Completed by July 1st.
The Norway Water Company have let the contract to build their reservoir on Sweet Hill in Paris on land bought of J. H. Clark about a mile from South Paris village, and to lay pipes connecting the reservoir with the mains of the present water system, to John E. Palmer of Boston. A. W. Walker & Son have taken the contract to deliver the pipe from the cars at the South Paris depot along the line to the pipes already laid.
The new reservoir will have a capacity of one million gallons, about twice as much as the present reservoir on Pike Hill. The writings were made Monday, and it is to be completed before the first of July.
"Arizona."
Much interest has been taken by the townspeople in the coming presentation of Augustus Thompson's powerful play, "Arizona," at the Opera House, Wednesday evening, Feb. 19. The production is in the hands of Chester E. Oelrich, whose work in presenting "The Old Homestead" last fall, placed him prominently in the confidence of the town. The scenery and electrical effects that created so much favorable comment in the former play, will be multiplied threefold in the current offering. The first and last acts, showing the buildings and court yards situated in the Aravaipa Valley, Arizona, will be two of the most massive sets ever put on at the Opera House. The electrical effects in the first act will be a feature.
The interior of the commander's home at the Post, second act, will be in blue and gold. With its French and Venetian windows, its cozy corners and its massive fireplace, Mr. Oelrich promises as pretty a set as will be seen in the theatres of the larger cities. Special attention is also called to the lighting effects of this act. The time is midnight. The moonlight streams in through the windows, and this, coupled with the glow of the fire, and the light from a huge gold Mexican hanging lamp, throws a pretty glow over the picture.
The third act shows the interior of a typical "Arizona" ranch house.
"Arizona" is a military play but is not a war drama. The only suggestion of the latter comes in the third act when the Spanish-American war breaks out and the 10th U. S. Cavalry receives orders to go to the front. The play was written by one of America's foremost dramatists, and it is considered to be the best American military plays ever written.
The situations at times are intense, not startling. A broad view of comedy runs through the play. The climax of the second act is undoubtedly the strongest ever written by a modern author.
The several parts are in the hands of the most capable of the local players, and a production that will be worth attention is a certainty. The affair is for the benefit of the Universalist church. Tickets now on sale at Stone's Drug Store.

There has been a little misunderstanding about the Temperance paper, the "Crusader Monthly." The W. C. T. U. is sending this publication to nearly all of our teachers, trusting that all may see and use it. Temperance teaching is required by law in our public schools. One of these laws reads thus, "Provision shall be made by the proper local school authorities for instructing all pupils in all schools supported by public money, or under State control, in physiology and hygiene, with special reference to the effects of alcoholic drinks, stimulants and narcotics upon the human system." We are hoping that the Crusader may be helpful along these lines. The Union pays the subscription for this year until next October. There will also be found material pertaining to the Prize Essay work, which Mr. Barnes has assured the writer shall be taken up in our schools. There are prizes offered worth striving for.
SOUTH PARIS.
Asaph H. Witham.
Asaph H. Witham died at his home in Portland, Wednesday, Feb. 5. He was born in Lisbon Feb. 13, 1833. He formerly lived in Portland, but for many years resided in South Paris where he was a machinist at the Paris Mfg. Co. On account of failing health he moved to Portland in September 1900, in order to be with his daughter.
Mr. Witham has been a very patient sufferer throughout his whole illness, going out at the last peacefully, as he had always lived. Mr. Witham was a man honored and loved by all who knew him. He enlisted in the Civil War, Feb. 5, 1862, from Lewiston in Co. H, Tenth Maine Regiment, and was a member of V. M. K. Kimball Post, G. A. R. of South Paris. One year ago he celebrated his 50th wedding anniversary here in Portland.
He is survived by a wife and three children, Dr. A. M. Witham of Westbrook, A. E. Witham of Springvale, and Agnes D. Witham of Portland.
The funeral was held from his late residence Saturday at 1 o'clock. The G. A. R. service was held by Bowdoin Post in conjunction with the family service. The floral tributes were many and beautiful.

Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Louise J. Briggs, Mrs. Agnes Penfold and William P. Morton were united in marriage by Rev. Andrew T. McWhorter of the Congregational church.
The room was handsomely decorated with white and pink carnations. The bride wore a gown of light silk trimmed with white lace. The groom wore the customary black suit. The single ring service was used and Mrs. Cora S. Briggs played Lohengrin's Wedding March. Only the immediate relatives and a few invited friends were present. Those from out of town were Nellie Jackson and Mrs. George McKenney of Portland and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence G. Morton of West Paris.
They left on the afternoon train for a trip to New York. Mrs. Morton's going away dress was a navy blue suit with coat and hat to match.
Both Mr. and Mrs. Morton are well known here and they have the best wishes of a large circle of friends.
Town Talk.
For the first time in about forty years it is said that the town report this year will show that the town is out of debt. The report will also show that not any of the appropriations have been overdrawn. This is an enviable standing and one that the citizens of Paris should and will be proud of. It is not often but what some or nearly all of the appropriations of a town are overdrawn.
The warrant for the coming annual March meeting will probably be posted next week. In addition to the usual articles to choose town officers, raise the usual funds, etc., there are two articles out of the ordinary line.
One is "To see if the town will instruct the selectmen to print in their annual report an abstract of the town valuation list as inventoried in 1902 and to indicate what items shall be included in such abstract."
The other, "To see if the town will appoint a committee to work with the assessors of the town, or independently thereof, to make a complete valuation and list of all the real estate in town of Paris, and to prepare suitable descriptions of the various parcels thereof and to fix the compensation of such committee."
There are two articles to see if the town will accept roads as laid out by the selectmen. One of these commences at the southerly side of Gary street, runs to the northerly corner of the lot owned by N. D. Bolster and E. N. Haswell, then in an easterly direction to the northeast corner of land owned by Etta Jacobs. The other begins at the easterly side of Durrell Hill cemetery leading easterly toward and to the road leading over Durrell hill, said road to be located on the land of the local Church of Christ.
There is also an article to see what sum of money the town will vote to raise to purchase two new road machines.

ACHED IN EVERY BONE.

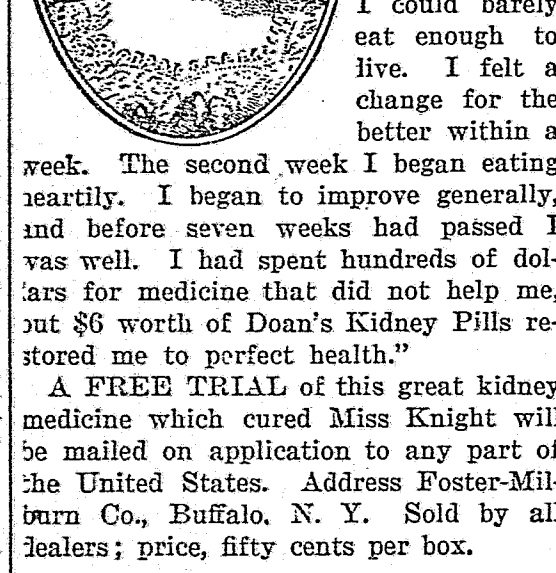

Chicago Society Woman Who Was So Sick She Could Not Sleep or Eat, Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

When a woman's kidneys go wrong, her back gives out and every little task becomes a burden. She is tired, nervous, sleepless, run down—suffers daily from backache, headaches, dizzy spells, and bearing-down pains.

Don't worry over imagined "female troubles." Cure the kidneys and you will be well. Read how to find the cure.

Marion Knight, of 33 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill., member of the Chicago Federation of Musicians and a well-known club woman, says: "This winter when I started to use Doan's Kidney Pills I ached in every bone and had in ten days pains in the kidneys and pelvic organs. The urine was thick and cloudy, and I could barely eat enough to live. I felt a change for the better within a week. The second week I began cutting nearly. I began to improve generally, and before seven weeks had passed I was well. I had spent hundreds of dollars for medicine that did not help me, but $6 worth of Doan's Kidney Pills restored me to perfect health."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Miss Knight will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-McBarn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers; price, fifty cents per box.

A Tribute to My Kittie.

I'm going to write a verse or two about our little, Bob.

He is a handsome rabbit cat. Seven years he's spent with us. And in that time fought many a rat. He never was vanquished, no, not he. For righteously he kills his cat.

And so he fought most valiantly With teeth and sharpened claws. As ev'ning on the hard for Bob, With rabbit instincts strong To say within doors most the time, To him the days seem long.

But sleep serene, my dear old pet The winter hours away; Be optimistic as you can, I hope there's many a day of happiness in store for you, So dignified of mien; A prettier kit, so fleetly marked, In Norway's rarely seen.

Most of friends has Bobby dear, Especially 'mong the young; The babies stroke his fine soft fur, He never does them harm.

Perhaps you think I'm foolish, To love my little so, I guess you're over-berished pets, Then humbler caste, can on theirs, love be shown.

NORWAY, MAINE. HATTIE A. SMALL.

Drifted In.
By JAMES ARBERT LIBBY.
On this quiet day of winter, Riding o'er Meguier Hill, I was thinking of my fathers, In the chimney's cold and still; I was thinking of my mothers, Whose love I never did win, And, so many, many others, Under snow-heaps drifted in.

De come back, so long departed To the gaze of memory's eye, And I saw the earnest-hearted, A-lying to and fro; Saw the church roof sadly broken, Then the old fort stormed at sin; Now, the walls are all tooken, The old house is drifted in.

Summer paths have grown to grasses, And the snows are deep and cold, Now and then a funeral passes, Since death lets us not alone; But through all the solemn Sundays, Till the winter snows begin, People wait some for Mondays, Then the church is drifted in.

Ah, these children of their fathers, Have forgotten how they did! And the seal of godly mothers, Went beneath the coffin lid; Pleasant places oft are winter time, And well worn the ways of sin; But the church is summer slighted And in winter drifted in.

The Snow-birds.
When the winter winds are blowing, And clouds are full of snow, There comes a flock of little birds A-lying to and fro; About the withered garden, Around the naked field, In any way-side shrub or tree That may a berry yield, You'll see them flitting, And hear their merry song; The scattered crumbs of summer's feast Feed winter birds long.

But when the snow-drifts cover The garden and the field, When all the shrubs are cased in ice, And every brook is sealed, Then come the little snow-birds, As beggars to your door; They pick up every tiny crumb, They have no chips for more. Give them a hearty welcome, It surely were not good, That they should starve in winter time—Should ever lack for food.

WEST BETHEL.
Schools in town closed Friday the 31st. Jennie Bean has been in Gorham for a few days.

A. S. Grover is working for the Percy Lumber Co. Edwin Arno of Bethel called on friends here, recently.

Fannie Westleigh went to the hospital last week, for treatment. Geo. Grover has been hauling logs to Bethel to be sawed into boards.

Payson Grover has his ice all in, and the rest of the farmers are getting theirs this week. It is of fine quality this year.

Ed. Bell, who has been boss on the railway section for three years, is through and a Mr. Lewis from South Paris is taking his place.

Florence Ellen, oldest daughter of A. J. Haskell and wife, died at her home in South Paris, Jan. 24. She was brought to West Bethel for burial.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is usually the result of an inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, it is entirely closed. Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; more cases of deafness are caused by this method than by any other. ALBANY.
Valley Road.
Mrs. Judith Grover Seavey, a former resident of Albany, died recently at her home in Bethel. Interment at Riverside cemetery.

G. E. Grover, who recently sold out his business, also his farm, is at present residing with his brother, Mrs. Grover, who is spending the winter in Stonyville, Mass., is much improved, but not able to take the care of a household. She not return until spring.

George Grover has nearly all his goods moved to his new home in Norway. He sold out his grocery business and stand to J. T. Gault, who still continues the business. Mr. Gault has filled up the store with goods and is doing a good business. It being the only store in town he should receive a large amount of patronage.

A New Proposition.
We understand that there is a movement on foot that may perhaps help to solve the question of more school room; more convenient quarters for the military company as well as for other public institutions.

The plan that has been suggested is one of a two-story building, the first floor to contain the school room, dressing room, hospital corps room, assessors office and a room for the public library. The second floor for a town hall, drill hall for Company D, officers' room, men's room, property room and space for lockers.

General Davis, when he visited Co. D last year, condemned the armory which is used by the company. Their room is so small and inconvenient that new quarters have got to be had. They have no room for the new lockers, which will soon be here. They will soon have new full dress uniforms and have no suitable places to place them, and besides the company is steadily increasing in numbers.

The plan given above has been suggested as a feasible one to overcome the numerous difficulties.

The man who grew whiskers has his laugh at last.

Managing Husbands.

Here is a good woman—six months married—who asks our advice as to the best way of managing a husband. She is sure it would do a great amount of good to get a few points in this direction.

Yes, but how about the husbands, will they thank us? And does our inquiring friend forget that we may be interested on the other side of the question?

However, we are always glad of a topic, and we will try to evolve a little wisdom out of this one, at least, we shall get an article! In the first place, then, according to our notion, the true way to manage a husband is not to manage him.

The most experienced and successful men-moulders and husband tamers would agree with us in the subtle wisdom of this suggestion, we are confident.

The average man, high or low, is a good deal of a pig in one particular; the way to get him to go North is to try to drive him to the South. He is also like a horse, you can coax him with corn in the measure; but if you put too much corn too many times he is the dearest and most independent of animals. He may let you get very near him, but it is only for his own diversion, just as you are going to slip the halter on, up fly his heels, and away he goes.

Another thing, if a husband needs too much management, it indicates there has been a mistake somewhere. There should be but one will, in a married couple that are truly mated, and that should be the will of the husband. The head of the household, as it does not always happen by any means, the day having gone by when sex alone outranks natural endowment of mind and spirit—is not the wife the heart, or in other words, the judgment and affections or emotions, come to an issue one must give way. But when love is the umpire, there can be no dispute, nor any sense of injustice in the one who yields.

We have known couples, not so many as we could wish, each of whom could truthfully say, after a dozen or twenty years walking "the long path" together, that they had their own way; because the necessary mutual yielding had been done so carefully and so wholly that but the one way remained.

There is a certain sort of strong-headed, self-willed fellow, good enough at heart but with queer ways of showing it sometimes, who undoubtedly needs managing in the home. The recipe for this is as old as Eve. We should be presumptuous to attempt to tell any woman possessed of the slightest knowledge of men. But for those who have not, we will repeat that it is simply "honey-fugling" them into the belief that they are having their own way, when it is your way all the time. Husband and wife are requested not to analyze and apply this too closely.

The operation is really a necessary one at times, and it leaves everybody happy, a sort of matrimonial ether, produced, a blessed unconsciousness, in which the pain of "giving up" is not felt.

Some of the more direct methods of managing husbands may be mentioned. Keep him in love with you, when that can be done all the rest follows. How it can be done, we do not know; you ought to, if you know what he first loved you for. We do not mean simply faithful, provident and kind, but loving, with all the world of meaning which that word contains.

It cannot always be done, for many men are selfish, sensual, and more yet are careless and unstable. But the good true men who love their wives are easily manageable in all reasonable directions. Uniform good nature and loving service will make a company of street gamins tractable.

Kindness will propitiate a lion. Devotion will inspire respect in the breast of a savage. Tact will supplement talent in swaying a state or leading the world.

And above and in all, and stronger than all, is love, "the impelling force of life."

Greatest Lumber Out.
More lumber was out in the United States last year than in any other year in its history. The enormous amount of 37,550,737 board feet was produced, and the mill value of this was $621,151,158. In addition to this were produced 11,855,200,000 shingles valued at $24,155,555 and 3,812,807,000 lath, valued at $11,400,570. On the whole, it is safe to say that the present annual lumber output of the United States approximates 40 billion feet, and that the total mill value of the lumber, lath and shingles each year produced is not less than $700,000,000. These figures give some idea of how vast is the lumber industry and how great is the demand for its products.

Last year the College of Agriculture, University of Maine, offered a four days' course of a very practical nature to the farmers of the State. This proved to be such a great success that this year, from March 9 to 13, in the College of Agriculture is preparing a program for the farmers' and their wives that will, if possible, eclipse that of last year.

Rheumatism Cannot Be Cured Unless Uric-O is Used Sudden Deaths, Heart Failure and Paralysis Are Caused By Poisonous Uric and Rheumatic Acids.

The Rheumatic person is skeptical regarding the claims of almost any remedy advertised as a cure for Rheumatism, and usually blames him for being so. All the plasters and liniments combined never actually cure a case of Rheumatism. They may relieve it in one quarter, but it is sure to break out somewhere else. The only way to cure Rheumatism is to drive it from the system, for as long as the Uric and Rheumatic Acid remains in the blood, it is never entirely free from the trouble. This is where the value of Uric-O as a permanent cure for Rheumatism comes in. It seeks out the Rheumatic poison in the blood, muscles, and kidneys, renders it inert and harmless, and drives it out of the system. That is why Uric-O is such an admirable and effective cure for Rheumatism.

The chief reason that Uric-O is such a wonderful cure for Rheumatism is, that it is designed and prepared to cure Rheumatism and Rheumatism only. It is composed of perfect antidotes for the rheumatic acid poison in the system. That the secret of its wonderful success, Rheumatism simply cannot exist in a person's system if Uric-O is used.

Uric-O is sold by druggists at 75c and $1.00 the bottle, but if you still feel skeptical about its efficacy you can test it free of charge by cutting out this advertisement and sending same, together with your name and address, also the name of your druggist to the Smith and Drug Co., 225 Smith Bldg., Syracuse, N. Y., and they will send you an order on the dealer for a 75-cent bottle free.

Uric-O is sold and personally recommended in Norway by Noyes Drug Store.

Timber Used for Spools.

Small things are not to be overlooked
in considering the problems of the future timber supply. The matchmaker is having as much trouble in getting the grade of wood necessary for his business as the dealer in telegraph poles.

One of the industries which deals with small things, yet which is one of the utmost importance to the country's commerce, is the manufacture and export of spool wood. This business is peculiar to the New England States and is centered in Maine. Spool factories of this state are now turning out eight million spools annually, with a market value of nearly $1,000,000.

The best quality of timber is used for the manufacture of spool wood. White birch, which is used almost exclusively for this industry, reaches the factory in the form of bars from 1/2 to 2-16 inches square and from 2 1/2 to 4 feet long. These bars must be absolutely clear. The birch is cut in winter and sawed into small, portable mills which operate near some railroad line, about 2 1/2 cords being required for 1,000 feet of bars. After sawing, the bars are piled cross-wise, in order to facilitate thorough seasoning, and protected from the weather by a covering of seasoned lumber.

The spool bar mills in Maine turn out about 15 million feet of bars during the year and approximately the same amount of material is manufactured into spools in the state.

The machines for making spools are complicated and require skilled men for their operation. The spools drop from the lathe at the rate of one per second and must be perfectly uniform and true.

The finished spools are marketed in this country largely in Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York and New Jersey, while the spool bars are largely exported to Greenock and Glasgow, Scotland, and to Hull and Fleetwood, England. Shipments to those points are made mostly from Bangor, as much as 8 million feet having been sent from that port in a season.

Lincoln as a Judge of Men.

Lincoln was a great politician. He was the most sagacious of all the great leaders of his party in attaining political

results, although a stranger to the common methods of political manipulation.

He studied men most intelligently, and he rarely, if ever, erred in assigning to a friend to the performance of a political duty.

He alone nominated Andrew Johnson for Vice-President in 1864, and there were not a score of men in the country who knew of his purpose to accomplish it.

He had no prejudice against Hamlin;
on the contrary, would have been glad to have Hamlin on the ticket again with him, but he had carefully looked over the field, and he felt that a change in the Vice-Presidency was a necessity for the reasons, which he gave to me personally the day before the meeting of the convention in Baltimore, in which I was the delegate at large from Pennsylvania, when he asked me to vote for Johnson
for Vice-President and told me why it should be done.

He anticipated a severe and perhaps a doubtful contest with McClellan; he believed that it would be necessary to bring into the support of the Republican ticket, in addition to the Democrats who had become Republicans, the large number of loyal war Democrats who yet maintained at least passive relations with the Democratic party.

Among them were such conspicuous characters as Dix of New York, and Francis Pickens of South Carolina. The nomination was made in the early summer of 1864, when no important victories had been achieved by our armies under Grant or Sherman, and the dark pall of recognition of the Confederacy by England and France yet hung over us.

He believed that in no way could our friends in the European countries be so greatly strengthened as by the election of a man to the second office of the Government from a reconstructed State in the heart of the Confederacy, and a man who had filled every important office within the gift of his State, and he thought it important thus to nationalize
the Republican party. [From "Lincoln
as a Politician," by Col. A. K. McClure, in The Circle for February.

Where the Shoe Pinches.

When you have only a dollar, it takes pretty close figuring to make it buy two dollars worth of things for the home.
How are you to do it?

Well, this is the way we do it at our house.

In the first place, we sit down and calculate what things we can get along without just as well as not. Lots of times we think we must have things that are not really necessary. It takes some grace in the heart to let them go, but we are really none the worse off without them, and we are so much the better able to get the things we ought to have.

And then we try to buy for cash. We do not like to pay anybody else's old debts. If you have the money to plank right down, you can always buy at a better advantage than if you run a store bill.

Again, we have learned that trading butter and eggs and such stuff does not pay as a rule. The dealer has his place all made to make a profit on the things you get from him, and then he is not willing, many times, to pay you quite so much for your farm stuff as you could get some where else. Cash all around is the best rule to go by; that is fair to everybody.

Another thing we have learned is that it pays to watch the advertisements.
Lots of times there are special sales at which you can get things a great deal cheaper. Sometimes in the spring you can buy winter clothing, for instance, at a great saving. I know of farmers who buy overcoats that way;
and one careful farmer's wife saved a lot of money by getting a winter coat at the end of the season's trade. Don't get in the habit of letting your money go for things that never amount to anything.
I know of farmers who keep themselves poor in just that way. They buy everything they see, no matter whether they want it or not. At the end of the year they are just as poor as they were at the beginning. It doesn't pay. When you pay out your money, get something worth while.

STOW.

Mrs. Joseph Kimball has taken a turn with the rest with the grip.

The grip is very prevalent here, yet
no cases are at present especially serious.

Benj. Barbour slipped and fell recently, injuring his shoulder quite badly.

Quite a cold wave visited here the 5th, 20 below zero and colder in nearby places.

All the sick ones are gaining at Joseph Wiley's excepting Mrs. Jordan. She is taking a second turn with the grip.

Mrs. Q. Stevens is very poorly from the recent sickness of grip. Helen Abbott was with her a week or more.

There seems to be a party of snow now to roll the roads. Don't think there is need to worry about not having any snow by the way it has commenced to look outside.

Wallace Lawsuit Settled.

The lawsuit over the estate of the late E. G. Wallace of Rochester, N. H., has been settled.

The result was arrived at at Laconia,
N. H., during the progress of the hearing on the question of whether the plaintiffs should be allowed to examine the defendants' private books.

The details of this case are: E. G.
Wallace died in 1893, leaving each of his three daughters the sum of $50,000, the same amount to his widow, and the balance up to $500,000 to his two sons, Albert and Sumner Wallace. Notes were given the sisters and widow and like notes were taken by the brothers for these specific legacies, drawing 5 per cent interest. The balance of the estate was to be divided equally between brothers, sisters and mother.

Legal proceedings were begun nearly four years ago by the daughters, who had later inherited their mother's share of the estate, they claiming that they had never received anything beyond the interest on their notes as stated. The case has since been continuously before the courts, although no public hearings have been held.

At the hearing the expert accountants
for both sides were giving their testimony. At noon the two sides got together and a settlement was reached, the details being arranged during the afternoon. It is understood that each of the plaintiffs is to receive a sum in excess of $250,000 as her share of the large estate.

The very best charity is to provide work for those who are in need. It is not always easy to know how to do this,
because many of the needy are not trained in any kind of work. When young and they had only themselves to provide for they neglected to prepare themselves for "the battle of life," and now with a family depending on them they cannot take the time. They may tell you when they apply for work they willing to do anything, if you ask them what they can do they will say anything, but there is not one thing they can do, without then asking each one of them standing over them or with the work on their minds, directing and correcting till it takes more time and energy than to do the work first hand. Then after all this fuss and showing the employer is expected to pay the price of skilled labor, because the one who is not skilled does not know it. He has put in his time and is not an hour of his time as good as anybody's?

Is Consumption Inherited?

Opinion of a Prominent Bacteriologist
Given at a Recent Lecture at Harvard College.

Prof. H. C. Ernst in a recent lecture before Harvard Medical school discussed this theory of heredity. He claims that consumption is not an inherited disease, and that the children of parents who have had tuberculosis are as likely to grow up strong and healthy as children of parents who have not. As a specific for further claims that the cardinal means for curing this dread disease are plenty of fresh air, sufficient nutritious food, rest and exercise.

For centuries physicians everywhere
have recognized the value of cod liver oil in the treatment of consumption and all wasting diseases, but unfortunately few could take it with benefit on account of the indigestible oil.

Vinol has solved this problem. It is the modern cod liver preparation without oil, made by a scientific, extractive and concentrating process from fresh cods' livers, combining with peptonate of iron, all the medicinal, healing and body-building elements of cod liver oil, but no oil or grease. As a specific for all throat and lung troubles, and as a strength creator and body builder, Vinol is unexcelled. Try it on our offer to return your money if it fails to give satisfaction. Frank P. Stone, Druggist, Norway, Me.

Better to Prevent Than Cure.

Deep Breathing.

A strong advocate of deep breathing says that by its practice she has cured herself of nervous headache, neuralgia
in the face, stiffness from over-work, indigestion, cold in the head and insomnia, not having had the expense of a physician for two years, and not having touched a drop of medicine for 13 months. She converted an attic, which has a window on every side, into a sort of "breathing room," and spends 15 minutes there every morning and evening, summer and winter, let the weather be what it may.

When very tired, she takes her breathing exercise in a recumbent posture on a comfortable couch; when the weather is very cold, she walks briskly across the floor and at other times stands quietly, with weight on balls of feet, head thrown back and chest lifted, raises the hands slowly while inhaling, touching the fingers above her head, then lets fall slowly while exhaling. This woman believes that "though a woman would family, she will escape that dreadful disease by continued practice in deep breathing."

Milk is Stimulating When Warm.

No one pretends that milk has the staying power of beef, on which to work but it is a perfect food, and for women who are working with mind or body, tired, or in a hurry, it may many times take the place of other nourishment or coffee, which ruins so many digestions and complexions. The actual effort of eating when one is tired is so great as to cause many women to avoid food when nourishment is really necessary, and it is at such times that milk becomes invaluable.

With milk, if a tablespoonful of lime water or a pinch of bicarbonate of soda is used, acidity that often disagrees with one will be avoided. If a woman would take a cup of hot milk when coming home from work she would soon find that both nerves and body were quickly refreshed. The same amount taken in the middle of the morning and again several hours after luncheon, if the convenience will be a tremendous help to repair the constant loss of energy.

When troubled with sleeplessness, to drink a cup of milk heated, just before getting into bed, will be found quieting and soothing, and another useful treatment for the bed to take during wakefulness often acts as a soporific.

Rumford Falls Liquor Sellers.

The trial of the cases of the 14 alleged liquor sellers arrested Tuesday afternoon was held Wednesday afternoon and evening last week, in the municipal court room, Judge Spear presiding. County Attorney Barnes prosecuted the cases.
Lawyer McCarthy defended most of them.

The men were arrested on evidence furnished by a "spotter" sent here by the county attorney. It is understood, in the person of C. E. Herman of Westbrook, an employee of the S. D. Warren Paper Co. of Westbrook, for the last 25 years, and a man in every way above reproach.

It is understood that he claimed in every instance where he was able to purchase liquors here, the bar keeper was obliged to get the goods out of a hide outside the shop or a third person who had liquor in his pocket, and he always exposed for sale behind the bar or any sold behind the bar by the keepers.

Joseph Paradis, Joseph Mitchell,
James Gallagher, Peter Perry, all old offenders, were fined $50 and costs each for 20 days in jail on complaint of single sale. They appealed and gave bonds in the sum of $200. Each of these was to be divided over in the sum of $200, each on complaint of common seller and nusance.

Edmund Tardiffe was fined $50 and costs and 30 days in jail on single sale.
He gave bonds for $200 and no charge of common seller was preferred against him. He was bound over on complaint of nuisance in the sum of $400 bonds.

Three cases of single sale, common seller and nuisance, against Ed. Casey were not pressed, for lack of evidence.
Casey was discharged.

Joseph Bouguy pleaded guilty to single sale and was fined $50 and costs with he paid. This was his first offense, also his first appearance in court on any charge.

Joseph Dube, Simon Larpehe, James McGee, Charles Hammond, Harry Delong, each were fined $50 and costs on single sale, and they appealed and were ordered to give $200 bonds for the appeal; also each were bound over in the sum of $200 on nuisance and common seller complaints.

A PEANUT SPREE.

Suggestions For a Merry Evening With the Toothsome Nuts.
From six to ten is the best number to play this game. A leader is chosen who arranges the order of events and takes down the records with pencil and paper. Prizes may be given to the winner in each stunt or to the one who at the end of the game has the greatest number of successes to his credit.

Two or three quarts of peanuts are spread on a table in the middle of the room.
A dish of any kind is filled with the nuts, and each player guesses how many it contains.
See who can hold the greatest number in one hand without the assistance of the other in placing them there.

A peanut is suspended by a thread about a yard long, and on the floor is placed a vase with mouth just large enough to receive the nut. Each player in turn holds the string so that the peanut dangles a foot or more above the vase and tries to drop it in.

Each person is given five peanuts, and at a signal all begin to shell them. He who finishes first is the winner. The inner skins must be removed and no nut broken. If one gets broken, another may be taken in its place.
Five nuts are placed on a chair at one end of the room. Each player in turn must take them, one by one, and put them on a chair at the opposite end of the room, returning them in like manner. The one doing it most quickly is the winner.

A large pin is stuck upright in the floor, and each player in turn pitches five peanuts at it, one by one. He who makes a nut remain nearest the pin wins.
Each shells five peanuts, and the one who catches the greatest number of these in his mouth after tossing them in the air wins.

A player is chosen by lot to stand at one end of the room with mouth wide open, while each of the others tries to toss three peanuts into it, one at a time.

What She Feared.
"I am not a bit afraid of the dark," said little Ethel to her mother one night. "Of course you're not. What should you be afraid of?" queried her mother. "Well, once I was afraid when I went into the pantry for a tart." "Why, what were you afraid of then, Ethel?" "I was afraid the tart might not be there," answered Ethel.

The Weight of the Spider's Web.
Here is something you never heard before and will doubtless find hard to believe when you do hear it, although it is true. The spider's web is so light that if you were to take a pound of it and unravel it it would be long enough to reach all the way round the world, with a sufficient quantity left to reach from New York to San Francisco.

To Clean Oil Paintings.
To clean an oil painting that is covered with dirt and flyspecks wipe all the dust from the painting with a soft cloth.
Put a little linseed oil in a saucer and, dipping the finger in the oil, rub the painting gently.
It will require time and patience, but the effect will repay you.
Artists say that in cleaning a painting nothing but the fingers, dipped in oil or water, should be used.

CURE FOR RED EYELIDS.

Hot Water and Antiseptic Cleansing Fluids Do the Work.

Only the simplest kind of treatment is necessary to reduce swollen or inflamed eyelids. Hot water, antiseptic cleansing fluids and simple astringents are the things required in this cure.

Many times inflammation comes from eye strain, and in such cases an oculist should be consulted. A low condition of the system, however, is frequently responsible for red and heavy lids, and while treating them externally it is well to take a tonic internally and do what one can to improve the general health.

When granulation is present make a paste to relieve the lids by rubbing a bit of alum into the raw white of an egg until the latter forms a curd. At night put this over the lids and place some on a linen bandage, which should be worn on the eyelids throughout the night. The paste should be made fresh each time.

While vaseline is most beneficial if applied to the edges of the lids every night, it is a balm rather than a medicine, for it has no stimulating or curing qualities.

Rinsing the eyes with a 5 per cent boracic acid solution is helpful. This should be done night and morning. To give this bath put the liquid into an eye glass in which it is possible to immerse the lids by opening and shutting them. This process clears the eye of any impurities or foreign matter and is one of the most harmless and best known applications for the eyes.

After this bath healing remedies should be put on. Oculists differ greatly as to the efficacy of cold or hot fomentations when there is inflammation. One scatters the trouble; the other brings it to a head. The application of a warm, but not hot, compress is undoubtedly soothing, and should be held in place for five or ten minutes. If the inflammation is due to the effect of strong light, such as sun or snow or bright light, it will be found well to bathe them gently, really mopping, with warm water. Afterward the should be wiped with a solution of witch hazel and water, half and half. If you can then stay in a darkened room for fifteen minutes the inflammation will probably disappear.

Should styrs recur frequently the services of an oculist should be sought.

BROWN BUTTER SAUCE.

Several Recipes For Serving With the Fish Course.

Place the desired amount of butter in a saucepan and heat until it becomes a rich brown color. Take care, however, that it does not burn. Add a little vinegar or lemon juice and pour over the fish or joint with which it is to be served. Another brown sauce is made by putting in a saucepan two tablespoons of butter and two table-spoons of flour. Cook until the flour is brown, stirring all the time. Then pour in one cup and a half of boiling water, simmering and stirring until smooth and thickened.

A still richer brown sauce is made in this way: Put two tablespoons of butter in a pan over the fire. Then add one sliced onion, one small carrot, one-half of a turnip chopped fine, a bay leaf and sprig of parsley. Cover and simmer fifteen minutes. Then place over the fire, where the vegetables will color without burning. Add two tablespoons of flour, stirring until the flour is well browned.

Add gradually two cups of stock, half a dozen peppercorns, three cloves and a blade of mace, with salt to season. Cover and simmer twenty minutes and serve. This sauce may serve as the foundation for the bordelaise sauce or may be varied by adding wine, lemon juice or mushrooms, thus making many different sauces with the same foundation.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

If a few drops of glycerin be added to the starch for linens it will be found that the iron will not stick and that the linens will have a beautiful gloss after they are ironed.

Use a clean brick to stand the iron on when ironing instead of the usual ironing stand. It has no holes underneath to admit the air, and the iron will retain their heat much longer.

New boots often do not take a good polish. They will do so if they are rubbed over with a cut lemon potato. If they are black with oil raw potato may be used instead of the lemon if the latter is not to be had.

To make paper stick to metal use a strong solution of washing-soda. While hot dip the metal in and when clean take it out and rub with a soft cloth. Apply onion juice to the metal, press the paper smoothly over it, and it will adhere like glue, and it will be almost impossible to separate the two.

Keeping Cake Pans From Sticking.
No matter how many devices there are in the way of patent cake pans, nothing gives more general satisfaction for layer cake than to line the pans with buttered paper.
It is a good idea to buy 10 cents' worth of the common yellow wrapping paper that is used in grocery stores, and some day when you have a little extra leisure cut these sheets to fit the different pans used. Thus some may be circular, others square or oblong and a few with a hole in the center for the Turk's head pans used for fruit or pound cakes.

Put these papers carefully away in the pantry closet, and they will prove worth their weight in eggs at present day prices when you come to bake your cakes on a crowded Saturday morning.
Do not grease the pan, only the top of the paper.
When the cake is done, then it should be turned upside down on a cloth and the paper pulled off as quickly as possible.

Young Folks

A PEANUT SPREE.

Suggestions For a Merry Evening With the Toothsome Nuts.

From six to ten is the best number to play this game. A leader is chosen who arranges the order of events and takes down the records with pencil and paper. Prizes may be given to the winner in each stunt or to the one who at the end of the game has the greatest number of successes to his credit.

Two or three quarts of peanuts are spread on a table in the middle of the room.

A dish of any kind is filled with the nuts, and each player guesses how many it contains.

See who can hold the greatest number in one hand without the assistance of the other in placing them there.

A peanut is suspended by a thread about a yard long, and on the floor is placed a vase with mouth just large enough to receive the nut. Each player in turn holds the string so that the peanut dangles a foot or more above the vase and tries to drop it in.

Each person is given five nuts, and at a signal all begin to spit them. He who finishes first is the winner. The inner skins must be removed and a nut broken. If one gets broken, another may be taken in its place.

Five nuts are placed on a chair at one end of the room. Each player in turn must take them, one by one, and put them on a chair at the opposite end of the room, returning them in like manner. The one doing it most quickly is the winner.

A large pin is stuck upright in the floor, and each player in turn pitches five peanuts at it, one by one. He who makes a nut remain nearest the pin wins.

Each shells five peanuts, and the one who catches the greatest number of these in his mouth after tossing them in the air wins.

A player is chosen by lot to stand at one end of the room with mouth wide open, while each of the others tries to toss three peanuts into it, one at a time.

Conundrums.

If a father gave 19 cents to one of his sons and 6 cents to the other, what time would it be? A quarter to 2.

If a postmaster went to a menagerie and was eaten by one of the wild beasts, what time would it be? Eight p. m.

If a guest at a restaurant ate a lobster and a second guest did the same, what would be the second guest's telephone number? 8-1-2.

How can you spell barge with thirteen letters? Bee, aye, are, gee, e-barge.

To what state should maidens and bachelors go? To Mary (marry) land.

Why is borrowed money like a man without friends? Because it is a loan (alone).

A New Version.

Old Mother Hubbard, she went to the cupboard.

And thought you think she found there?

Her dog and her cat.

Had been there before that.

And left all the cupboard shelves bare.

What She Feared.

"I am not a bit afraid of the dark," said little Ethel to her mother one night. "Of course you're not. What should you be afraid of?" queried her mother. "Well, once I was afraid when I went into the pantry for a tart." "Why, what were you afraid of then, Ethel?" "I was afraid the tart might not be there," answered Ethel.

The Weight of the Spider's Web.

Here is something you never heard before and will doubtless find hard to believe when you do hear it, although it is true. The spider's web is so light that if you were to take a pound of it and unravel it it would be long enough to reach all the way round the world, with a sufficient quantity left to reach from New York to San Francisco.

To Clean Oil Paintings.

To clean an oil painting that is covered with dirt and dyspepsis wipe all the dust from the painting with a soft cloth.

Put a little linseed oil in a saucer and, dipping the finger in the oil, rub the painting gently.

It will require time and patience, but the effect will repay you.

Artists say that in cleaning a painting nothing but the fingers, dipped in oil or water, should be used.

Do as he says.

CURE FOR RED EYELIDS.

Hot Water and Antiseptic Cleansing Fluids Do the Work.

Only the simplest kind of treatment is necessary to reduce swollen or inflamed eyelids. Hot water, antiseptic cleansing fluids and simple astringents are the things required in this cure.

Many times inflammation comes from eye strain, and in such cases an oculist should be consulted. A low condition of the system, however, is frequently responsible for red and heavy lids, and while treating them externally it is well to take a tonic internally and do what one can to improve the general health.

When granulation is present make a paste to relieve the lids by rubbing a bit of alum into the raw white of an egg until the latter forms a curd. At night put this over the lids and place some on a linen bandage, which should be worn on the eyelids throughout the night. The paste should be made fresh each time.

While vaseline is most beneficial if applied to the edges of the lids every night, it is a balm rather than a medicine, for it has no stimulating or curing qualities.

Kinking the eyes with a 5 per cent boracic acid solution is helpful. This should be done night and morning. To give this bath put the liquid in a eye glass in which it is possible to immerse the lids by opening and shutting them. This process clears the eye of any impurities or foreign matter and is one of the most harmless and best known applications for the eyes.

After this bath healing remedies should be put on. Oculists differ greatly as to the efficacy of cold or hot fomentations when there is inflammation. One scatters the trouble; the other brings it to a head. The application of a warm, but not hot, compress is undoubtedly soothing, and should the lids be inflamed from the effect of strong light, such as sun or street light, it will be found well to bathe them gently, really mopping, with warm water. Afterward they should be wiped with a solution of witch hazel and water, half and half. If you can then stay in a darkened room for fifteen minutes the inflammation will probably disappear.

Should styes recur frequently the services of an oculist should be sought.

BROWN BUTTER SAUCE.

Several Recipes For Serving With the Fish Course.

Place the desired amount of butter in a saucepan and heat until it becomes a rich brown color. Take care, however, that it does not burn. Add a little vinegar or lemon juice and pour over the fish or joint with which it is to be served. Another brown sauce is made by putting in a saucepan two tablespoons of butter and two tablespoons of flour. Cook until the flour is brown, stirring all the time. Then pour in one cup and a half of boiling water, simmering and stirring until smooth and thickened.

A still richer brown sauce is made in this way: Put two tablespoons of butter in a pan over the fire. Then add one sliced onion, one small carrot, one-half of a turnip chopped fine, a bay leaf and sprig of parsley. Cover and simmer fifteen minutes. Then place over the fire, where the vegetables will color without burning. Add two tablespoons of flour, stirring until the flour is well browned.

Add gradually two cups of stock, half a dozen peppercorns, three cloves and a blade of mace, with salt to season. Cover and simmer twenty minutes and serve. This sauce may serve as the foundation for the bordelaise sauce or may be varied by adding wine, lemon juice or mushrooms, thus making many different sauces with the same foundation.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

If a few drops of glycerin be added to the starch for linens it will be found that the iron will not stick and that the linens will have a beautiful gloss after they are ironed.

Use a clean brick to stand the iron on when ironing instead of the usual ironing stand. It has no holes underneath to admit the air. The iron will retain their heat much longer.

New boots often do not take a good polish. They will do so if they are rubbed over with a cut lemon before they are blacked. A cut raw potato may be used instead of the lemon if the latter is not to be had.

To make paper stick to metal use a strong solution of washing soda. While hot dip the metal in and when clean take it out and rub with a soft cloth. Apply onion juice to the metal, press the paper smoothly over it, and it will adhere like glue, and it will be almost impossible to separate the two.

Keeping Cake Pans From Sticking.

No matter how many devices there are in the way of patent cake pans, nothing gives more general satisfaction for layer cake than to line the pans with buttered paper.

It is a good idea to buy 10 cents' worth of the common yellow wrapping paper that is used in grocery stores, and some day when you have a little extra leisure cut these sheets to fit the different pans used. Thus some may be circular, others square or oblong and a few with a hole in the center for the Turk's head pans used for fruit or pound cakes.

Put these papers carefully away in the pantry closet, and they will prove worth their weight in eggs at present day prices when you come to bake your cakes on a crowded Saturday morning.

Do not grease the pan, only the top of the paper.

When the cake is done, then it should be turned upside down on a cloth and the paper pulled off as quickly as possible.

OXFORD.

Tenth Anniversary, T. A. Roberts W. R. C.

The T. A. Roberts Relief Corps celebrated the 10th anniversary of their organization on Monday evening, Feb. 10th. The vestry of the Methodist church was handsomely decorated for the occasion. An invitation had been extended to the G. A. R. Post and a few others, who greatly enjoyed the hospitality of the ladies.

Their hall was beautifully and tastefully festooned in the national colors and decorated with the emblems of the order.

1598 1908 were conspicuous on either side and in front reminding one of the decade of the splendid work done by the Corps.

After a bountiful supper had been served, which was partaken of by nearly 100 of the Corps and friends, a pleasing program was carried out consisting of singing and speeches by the president, Agnes Mullholland, also by Mrs. Stevens, Department President of the National W. R. C. of Maine, who was present as the guest of the T. A. Roberts Corps.

Bertie M. Phillips, Past Augustus Chapter, gave a history of the organization.

The charter members, eight of whom were present, were given reserved seats and presented with souvenir badges made for the occasion, and the gift of the president, Jean A. Mullholland. The literary program as follows:

A White Lie.

The drama, "A White Lie," presented in Robinson hall, Friday evening, the 7th, for the benefit of S. of T., was a success in every way. Although there were many stay-at-homes on account of sickness and bad traveling, yet a large and appreciative audience greeted the players at rise of curtain, and an intense interest was maintained until the end.

The players of the company, Ida Stone, Angie Thayer and Arthur Walker, did themselves proud and received well deserved praise.

Mrs. Emma Holden as the old maid, Ariminta, was at her best and every one who has seen her work knows what that means. Edna Miller as the lawyer, Timothy Moore, finally finds out which side his bread is buttered on and gobbles Ariminta and her thirty thousand dollars. Perley French as the negro impersonator "Tuffy" was right in his element. His comical work was most timely.

The dance following drama was participated in by about thirty couples. Several gallons of "hot" ice cream were eaten after the show. There was a good time on right side of ledger and the committee who had the entertainment in charge are well satisfied.

Get a New Back.

Paper doll days are over with dame fashion. We must have backs, and they must be things of beauty—that is, for the girl who wants to look stylish. A year or two ago it was a matter of choice whether or not one cultivated the Ethel Barrymore back, but there is no choice about the new back. We must get willow. Women will all have to become contortionists if they keep getting new backs or fronts every year. Some say the corset's the thing, but girls who have tried being laced into some of these new "no hips" affairs say it's all a delusion and a scare. The only way to get the new back is to grow this.
This new back goes in sharply at the waist line, and the owner of it stands so straight that she seems to be bending over backward. Girls who have really acquired it say they did it by walking.
One girl never takes a street car for any place that she can reach by walking. Incidentally it saves car fares. She started by being tired to death after a one mile jaunt, but now she walks ten quite easily. Strange to say, although she was rather a fat girl when she started in,
instead of tightness, her corsets for the
"no hips" effect she loosened them.
"That's so my muscles can get a chance to work," said she.

HIRAM.

Mrs. Thompson Cotton.
The community was saddened Wednesday morning, by the death of Mrs.
Thompson Cotton, who had lingered
many weeks between life and death.
Mrs. Cotton was born in Porter about 1841. She married Benjamin Kidlon for her first husband, living with him until separated by his death in 1887. After a few years she married Thompson Cotton of Hiram. Five children were born to them, two boys and three girls.
She will be remembered as a kind neighbor, willing with a helping hand in all times of need. She leaves a husband and five children and a large circle of friends.

Mrs. Charles Kidlon and Eli Clemons are convalescing.
The mail carrier is laid by with a bad cold, it being the first time in over four years. A. F. Berry, substitute, is carrying the mail.

Mrs. G. C. Lowell's flock of 100 white Wyandotte hens laid 125 dozen eggs during the month of January. Whose birds dies beat that?

Candlemas day fair and bright, winter will take another flight. But it is not always so as we have remembered. This year is an exception as winter did not commence here until after Candlemas day.

The village schools closed this week with an entertainment, Monday night, at K. of P. Hall. The teachers and pupils gave an entertainment consisting of the play, Sculptor's Triumph, and the pantomime, A Marriage Failure, followed by the drill, Flag of all Nations. Music was by Small's Orchestra, assisted by
Will Bennett of Brownfield as cornetist.

Good Manners.
There is no gainsaying the fact that the cultivation of good manners has much to do with high-mindedness, which is so essential to every well regulated life. Politeness always pays, and the nice girl always attracts to her nice people.

WORMS IN CHILDREN

6 YEARS SUFFERING
RELIEVED IN 8 HOURS

DANVILLE.
DR. TRUE, DEAR SIR:—One of my boys had been troubled for about six years with cramp in the stomach, and suspecting that it might be brought on by worms, we gave him different medicines, but without effect. Last January he had more severe attack than usual, and hearing of the almost miraculous effects of your Elixir, we gave him about a teaspoonful, and in about eight hours it brought from him a living creature about eighteen inches in length. He has had no return of them since, and is now very hearty.
G. W. VICKERY.

Thousands of people have worms and don't know it, yet the symptoms are easily recognized.
Even though worms might not be present changes in the run-down system. It is a great stomach and liver tonic and regulator.
Worms in adults and children can be readily detected from the following symptoms: Indigestion; a variable appetite; offensive breath and foul tongue; eyes heavy and dusky; itching of the nose; short, dry cough; grinding of the teeth; starting during sleep; slow fever and often in children, convulsions and bed-wetting; looseness; hard, swollen bowels. No matter how pronounced or how light the symptoms,
DR. TRUE'S ELIXIR

will restore the patient to normal health again.

TURNER, ME.
DR. J. P. TRUE, DEAR SIR:—Having used your Elixir in my family for many years, after having satisfied myself of its superior merits, I recommended it to my neighbors, who now very generally use
it. I consider it the very best medicine now in use, especially for children.
Very truly yours, JOB PRINCE.

NEW GLOUCESTER, MASS.
DR. TRUE, DEAR SIR:—The Elixir I purchased of you cured my boy, who had been troubled with worms ever since he was a child. He had tried many other medicines, and I had employed physicians until I found it of no use. I despaired of his being restored to health till I heard of your Elixir, which, I am happy to say, effected a speedy cure.
Very truly yours, W. G. COOMBS.

The Game of Warning.

The game of warning furnishes lively sport for an outdoor party.

One of the players, having been chosen by lot as warmer, takes his stand at a place marked off as home, the rest remaining at a little distance from it.
The warmer then calls "Warning!"
three times and moves forward with his hands clasped in front of him. In this position he must try to touch one of the other players with his clasped hands, and they must try to make him unclasp them by pulling at his arms, drawing temptingly near, etc. If they succeed in making him unclasp them or if he does so inadvertently he must run "home" as fast as possible. If he is caught before reaching it he loses his place as warmer. If, on the contrary, he succeeds in touching any player with clasped hands the one so touched becomes his ally, and they both run home as fast as possible.

Having reached home, they are safe,
and then they call the three warnings and move forward together, hand in hand, and try to capture another player without loosing their hold. Every captured player is added to their ranks, but must be taken home before he can take a share in the contest. The line of warmers thus increasing, the difficulty of evading capture grows greater, but it is also a source of weakness, because a long line becomes unwieldy, and a player at large may succeed in breaking through at any weak point.

The field of play must be within rather narrow limits, for the only chance of the warmers to capture the players is to corner them. The last player to escape capture becomes warner for the next game.

Decisiveness.
Two little girls, Mary Grey and Kittie Kendall, were seated in the schoolroom together. Mary was reading a story book under cover of the desk
when Kittie suddenly said, "Here comes the teacher." The story book was at once pushed out of sight, and both girls were busily engaged in the study of their history lesson when the teacher got to their desk and with a smile said, "I am pleased to see two such studious girls."

After she had left the room Kittie remarked, "Wasn't it a good thing I saw her in time?"
"No; I think I would rather she had seen me and told me how wrong it was. I don't think I should feel so mean," replied Mary.

A Kitten That Grew.

I had a little kitten.
His name was Pussy Grey.
I lent him to a lady
While I was far away.
She petted him, she fed him
On things to make him fat,
And now I have him back again—
My kitten is a cat!

Fingers Before Forks.

Queen Elizabeth was a very grand lady and fond of fine clothes and costly jewels, but one thing she did not possess in the early part of her reign, and that was forks. If you had been invited to dine with her you would have done just as her courtiers did—eaten your meat with your fingers.

Yet, although these lords and ladies had no forks, they were as dainty and careful in their manner of eating as the great people of our own day. They had knives, and they had fingers, and with these they managed very well.
We learn how they did it from their old books on good manners.

In the first place, every person washed his hands on sitting down at table.
Before the meat was brought in it was prepared so it could be easily laid hold of with the fingers. If stewed, as was nearly always the case, it was in little bits; if roasted it was cut in slices by a carver and placed on the table in large plates.

When helping himself each person had to choose and keep a certain part of the dish for his own. He helped himself daintily from his place, using only three fingers. Afterward in carrying the food to the mouth, which, of course, was done with the hand, the same three fingers were used. Of course all this spoiled the hands, and at various times during the meal bowls of perfumed water and napkins were brought around, and no one must refuse to wash. This old custom of handing around a silver bowl or dish of rosewater is still sometimes seen.
After awhile forks slowly began to come into use. Great ladies kept them in their rooms to eat comfits with and to toast bread, and in course of time
they brought them to the table.

At first there was a feeling against the use of forks, chiefly because they came from abroad, and the first few persons who dared to use them were laughed at. The habit spread slowly in England.

For a long time, however, it was only among the rich that forks were used. Until about a hundred years ago travelers used to carry knives and forks when they went on a long journey, for they could never be sure of finding them at the inns on the road.—

Clever Conundrums.
How does a big railway time table resemble human life? It has many "ups" and "downs."
What is that which is often brought to the stable, always cut, but never eaten? A pack of cards.

Which is the more valuable, a ten dollar note or ten silver dollars? A ten dollar note, because when you put it in your pocket you double it, and when you take it out you see it in creases.

Why is the conundrumist like a dog's tail? Because he is bent on being wag-gish.

How many insects does it take to make a landlord? Ten-ants.

Why is a nearly burned out candle a county in Ireland? Because it is Wicklow.

Button, Button! Who Has the Button?
This game is lots of fun. Seat yourselves in a circle, with hands closed.

One takes a button and goes around with it, tapping the closed fists of the players as if inserting the button and saying:
"Biddy, Biddy, hold fast this thing Till I go to town to buy me a ring."

Each child in turn is then required to guess who has the button and if successful takes the leader's place. If unsuccessful he pays a forfeit.

In England they play it with a ring
and say:
"My lady lost her golden ring,
I pitch on you to find it."
Another form of the question is:
"Fox, fox, who's got the box?"

GREENWOOD.

More About the Town Buildings' Fire.
At the time of the fire that consumed the house on the Greenwood town farm, S. R. Cole, the overseer, was ill, as also was Sabina Yates, one of the inmates. When the fire was discovered it had made such headway all efforts to extinguish it were in vain.

Lucinda Howe, insane, occupied the room where most of the fire was at dis- cover and in another two minutes it is safe to say she would have been beyond rescue. She had made no sound and it is a question if, had the fire reached and burned her, she would have made an outcry.

Only a small part of the furniture was saved as the flames spread rapidly and in a short time the whole building was a mass of flames. It is a miracle that the barn escaped unharmed as it is not over thirty feet distant. The strong westerly breeze and the large amount of snow on the roof were undoubtedly the means whereby the barn escaped.

The town had an insurance of $1,000 on the buildings, of which about two-thirds was on the house. S. R. Cole had an insurance of something like $300 on his furniture. For the present, until the action of the town in regard to building is taken, the overseer and town farm inmates are stopping at the residence of F. H. Maxfield.
